

Brothers and Sisters,

After a three-year hiatus, we were able to return to Las Vegas for Communicating for Safety 2022. CFS continues to be the premier aviation safety conference. It brings together members of the aviation community including air traffic controllers and the other aviation safety professionals that NATCA represents, as well as many industry stakeholders, pilots, and FAA and other governmental leaders. The conference program features keynote speeches by aviation leaders, panel discussions, and breakout sessions.

To those that were able to attend the conference, we thank you for your participation and hope that you have already relayed valuable information received during the conference to your colleagues.

Those of you that were not able to attend, we hope that you will be able to attend and experience CFS next year.

In the NATCA Update, we will be recapping the entire conference, including panel discussions, speakers, awards presentations, and more. Today, we're highlighting our keynote speakers and panels. Click on the video links below to view presentations and learn more about what was discussed to help ensure that we continue to run the safest, most efficient airspace in the world as we expand and grow.

Stay tuned for the next issue of the NATCA Update where we will recognize the award winners honored during CFS 2022.

In Solidarity,

Rich Santa, NATCA President

Andrew LeBovidge, NATCA Executive Vice President
Chrissy Padgett, NATCA Safety Committee Chair
Tom Adcock, Safety and Technology Dept. Director
